They also scour hundreds of newspapers, magazines, trade publications, and electronic news services for data. In all, more than 200 million financial transactions are added each year to Dun & Bradstreet's database.

LLH was established in 2001 as a sole proprietorship with one employee. Today LLH has over 50 Employees and Associates. “I am extremely proud of my stellar crew,” John W. Ballentine, Jr., Director of Operations, said. “It is because of their dedication, technical ability and commitment to customer service that LLH was able to obtain such a fantastic rating. Each Employee and Associate in the field should feel satisfied that their hard work and expertise have been acknowledged at a larger business level. They really raised the bar!”

The following report, released today, gave LLH extremely high marks. While no buyer is specifically identified in the Open Ratings Past Performance Evaluation, the outstanding grades suggest extremely satisfied customers. “This report will positively impact future business opportunities for LLH as it is one of the indicators the Government uses to determine whether to award additional contract work to the firm,” said Ballentine.
